U.S. presidential hopeful Sanders has heart procedure, suspends campaign

Sanders, 78, is the oldest candidate for 2020 election

U.S. presidential candidate Senator Bernie Sanders was hospitalized on Tuesday with chest pains and a blockage in one artery and will suspend his campaign for the White House until further notice, an adviser said.

Sanders, 78, was in Las Vegas, Nevada, for 2020 presidential campaign events when he experienced discomfort and was taken to a hospital for evaluation.

"Following medical evaluation and testing he was found to have a blockage in one artery and two stents were successfully inserted," Sanders senior adviser Jeff Weaver said in a statement.

"Sen. Sanders is conversing and in good spirits. He will be resting up over the next few days. We are canceling his events and appearances until further notice, and we will continue to provide appropriate updates," Weaver said.

Sanders, the oldest candidate among the 19 contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination, was scheduled to hold a town hall in Las Vegas and appear at a gun safety forum on Wednesday.

Aides did not offer any guidance on how long Sanders might be off the campaign trail. The first nominating contest is not until Feb. 3 in Iowa, but Sanders is one of 12 candidates scheduled to participate in the fourth Democratic debate in Ohio on Oct. 15.

The U.S. senator from Vermont has been among the top contenders in the crowded field seeking the 2020 nomination to challenge Republican President Donald Trump.

A Democratic socialist, Sanders galvanized progressives during a 2016 run for president when he lost the nomination to Hillary Clinton but popularized left-wing ideas such as Medicare for All, his proposal for a government-run healthcare plan based on the system for Americans over the age of 65.

Sanders had been running in second place in the Democratic race behind front-runner Joe Biden until the last month, when a surge by fellow progressive and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren moved her ahead of Sanders in many polls.

The campaign halt comes the day after Sanders reported a big $25.3 million fundraising haul for the third quarter, putting him in the early lead in the closely watched campaign money race.

"Thinking of @BernieSanders today and wishing him a speedy recovery. If there's one thing I know about him, he's a fighter and I look forward to seeing him on the campaign trail soon," Democratic 2020 rival Kamala Harris, a U.S. senator from California, said on Twitter. REUTERS

UK PM Johnson makes final Brexit offer

2 British Prime Minister Boris Johnson made a final Brexit offer to the European Union on Wednesday, pitching a possible compromise for a last-minute exit deal that was cautiously welcomed by the EU though the two sides still remain far apart. In what Johnson's supporters cast as a moment of truth after more than three years of Brexit crisis, Johnson urged Brussels to compromise but warned that if it did not then Britain would leave the EU without a deal on Oct. 31. Johnson went further than many expected on the most contentious issue—the border between British-ruled Northern Ireland and EU member Ireland—with a proposal for an all-island regulatory zone to cover all goods, replacing the so-called backstop arrangement he says he cannot accept. HK workers, students denounce shooting of teen

3 Hong Kong office workers and high-school students turned out in their hundreds under a sweltering midday sun on Wednesday to denounce a policeman for shooting and wounding a teenager during the most violent clashes in nearly four months of unrest. The office workers marched to Chater Garden in the Central business district as the students, some in the same class as the wounded 18-year-old, demonstrated outside his New Territories school. More than 100 people were wounded during Tuesday's turmoil, the Hospital Authority said, as anti-China demonstrators took to the streets across the Chinese-ruled territory, throwing petrol bombs and attacking police who responded with tear gas and water cannons. Five remained in a serious condition with 35 stable. REUTERS

NK claims successful test of sub-launched missile

4 North Korea said on Thursday it had successfully test-fired a new type of submarine-launched ballistic missile (SLBM) from the sea off its east coast on Wednesday, aimed at containing external threats and bolstering its self-defense. The launch came a day after it announced the resumption of talks with the United States on ending its nuclear program. It is seen by analysts as the most provocative test by North Korea since it started the talks with the United States in 2018. REUTERS

The MTA is rolling out a new system to help keep the bus lanes clear.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Starting on Oct. 7, the MTA will be using a new automated bus-mounted camera system to help prevent motorists who block bus lanes, also known as bus blockers.

The Automated Bus Lane Enforcement (ABLE) system will be put on 51 buses that travel on M15 SBS in the bus lane. It will also help initiate a new graduated fee structure for bus blockers.

The new cameras will help capture evidence of people committing bus lane violations. The cameras are able to pull photos and videos, license plate information, and location and timestamp information. ABLE will also provide evidence for vehicles making legal turns from bus lanes, ensuring they are not ticketed.

The information from ABLE will go to the New York Department of Transportation for review and processing. The NYC Department of Finance will also be involved.

If motorists continue to violate within the 12-month time span, they will be charged $100 for a second offense, $150 for the third, $200 for the fourth and $250 for the fifth violation.

If a motorist blocks the bus lanes during the initial 60-day grace period, they will be given a warning without a fine. After the grace period is over, drivers who continue to block bus lanes will be charged $50 for their first offense.

If motorists continue to violate within the 12-month time span, they will be charged $100 for a second offense, $150 for the third, $200 for the fourth and $250 for the fifth violation. Beyond five violations, motorists will continue to be charged $250 per violation within the 12-month period. Each violation also carries a $25 late fee.

"The message will be crystal clear: If you're a repeat bus blocker, you will be penalized accordingly."

Craig Cipriano

Craig Cipriano, Acting MTA Bus Company President and Senior Vice President for Buses of NYC Transit said in a press release that, "A graduated fine structure shows how serious we are about keeping bus lanes clear as we strive to improve service for customers and speed up everyone's rides."

Additionally, Cipriano added, "The message will be crystal clear: If you're a repeat bus blocker, you will be penalized accordingly."

The ABLE system will expand to busses that travel to B44 SBS and M14 SBS by November. The ABLE system will eventually be deployed on 123 buses across three different routes. The new MTA Capital Plan will include $85 million to expand the program.

Trump impeachment probe gains steam with briefing, depositions

Specialist knowledge against Trump sought.

Two former officials who were engaged in the Trump administration's dealings with Ukraine will meet with U.S. congressional committees starting this week, as the impeachment inquiry into President Donald Trump gains steam.

Congressional staff was also due to attend a briefing at the Capitol on Wednesday by the State Department's inspector general, Steve Linick, according to two sources familiar with the situation.

Staff members from the Senate and House of Representatives Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations, Intelligence, Oversight and Appropriations committees were invited to the briefing. The session was expected to address Ukraine-related documents that have been subpoenaed by House committees.

Following a whistleblower complaint last week, Democrats are looking into Trump's request to Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy during a July 25 phone call to investigate former Vice President Joe Biden, a leading contender in the Democratic race to run against Republican Trump in the 2020 election.

The unidentified whistleblower is said to be an intelligence agent who accused Trump of soliciting foreign interference for his personal political benefit.

Trump has denied wrongdoing and assailed the probe.

Kurt Volker, who resigned last week as Trump's special representative for Ukraine, was to go to Capitol Hill to give a deposition to House staff on Thursday, the day he had been asked to appear.

Marie Yovanovitch, who was U.S. ambassador to Ukraine until she was abruptly recalled in May, has agreed to appear on Oct. 11, not on Wednesday as originally requested.

With their deep knowledge of Ukraine, testimony by Yovanovitch and Volker could be especially important to the impeachment probe formally launched by House Speaker Nancy Pelosi last week.

The inquiry could lead to approval of articles of impeachment—or formal charge—against Trump in the House. That would lead to a trial in the Senate on whether to remove him from office. But the president's fellow Republicans control that chamber and have shown little appetite for removing him.

Yovanovitch was ordered back to Washington two months before the end of her three-year tour in Kyiv. The career diplomat, who had served during both Republican and Democratic administrations, had been the subject of attacks in right-leaning media and Democrats had suggested her recall was politically motivated.

Over the past few days, the Democratic chairmen of the House Foreign Affairs, Intelligence and Oversight committees have issued subpoenas to Secretary of State Mike Pompeo and Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, and scheduled depositions with a series of other current and former officials, as well as associates of Giuliani, as they seek to unearth more evidence of potential wrongdoing by Trump. Two years on, Hollywood reflects on #MeToo changes

"This job is not done. It will never be done."

This week marks two years since the New York Times and the New Yorker published accounts by multiple women accusing film producer Harvey Weinstein of sexual misconduct, fueling the #MeToo movement against sexual harassment and a drive to empower women who work behind and in front of the camera.

Weinstein is due to stand trial in January on charges of rape and predatory assault of two women. He denies any non-consensual sex.

Actors, directors and producers recently shared how much Hollywood has changed since October 2017. Below are their replies, edited for length and clarity.

JULIA LOUIS-DREYFUS

"I'd like to say that I feel like men might be beginning to behave themselves a little bit better, and I say maybe. I'm not saying they have definitively, but there is a new way of communicating, or a slightly new awareness, an awareness shift that's happened. It's in process. This job is not done. It will never be done, but I think there's a way of communicating that has improved, hopefully."

PATRICIA ARQUETTE

"The #MeToo movement - my sister was one of the first people to come out - and I think it's had a ripple effect all across the world, beyond Hollywood. Luckily there is more representation of women and women of color on television than there was before, but it's still not really equal yet ... Activists and people have been trying to get this work done for a long, long time, but the more we have this conversation, the more we ask for it, the more we talk about the need for it, the better. You have movies like 'Wonder Woman' and 'Black Panther' busting box office records and then suddenly, all of a sudden, the world is like 'Oh, right, they could be successful.' The business is sometimes the last one to learn."

BRAD PITT

"We seem to work as a pendulum. We swing too far one way, then we find that sweet spot, and then we go too far back and we keep on this swing. But what is going on, which is positive, is that we're recalibrating our relationships, behaviors and workplace. It's long overdue and needed, and it's a good thing."

Actress Angelina Jolie thinks "we have very far to go" in the #MeToo era. REUTERS

MICHELLE WILLIAMS

"I've seen so many changes within my industry, but not just within my industry ... I see it at my daughter's school. I see it in my friends' places of employment. I see it really everywhere, and it gives me great faith that the world that these girls are growing up in is going to be different than the one that you and I grew up in."

ANGELINA JOLIE

"I think we have very far to go. I think even in Hollywood there should have been an independent inquiry... There's a lot of focus about what they say women want and I would say it's not what we want. It's what we'd like not to be done to us. Do not limit us to have an education, do not harm us whether it be at war or in our own homes, do not oppress us or try to control us, do not limit our possibilities as human beings and just let us be."

KRISTEN STEWART

"There's this solidarity that is providing women with a chance to start finally telling their own stories and not being used as sort of tools to tell their stories through other people ... There are so many untapped resources and ways in which we can inhabit our own stories and repossess our narrative. (It) is fully doable right now and for the first time, like ever, so it is an exciting time for women in film, like, enormously."

CARA DELEVINGNE

"I think the #MeToo movement has changed a lot, but like a lot of hashtag movements, the problem is that when you do a hashtag or something, people think it's fixed. But it's not. It hasn't really changed anything, because it's still happening."

MICHELLE PFEIFFER

"I think there's been such a seismic shift in awareness in just a year. I think there's a long way to go..." REUTERS

Ex-Dallas cop gets 10-year sentence for wrong-apartment slaying

The death of Botham Jean sparked protests.

Amber Guyger REUTERS

Former Dallas police officer Amber Guyger was sentenced by a Texas jury to 10 years in prison on Wednesday, after a jury found her guilty of murder for walking into a neighbor's apartment thinking it was her own and shooting him dead.

The same jury took less than six hours on Tuesday to find Guyger guilty in the Sept. 6, 2018, killing of Botham Jean, a 26-year-old black PwC accountant. His death sparked street protests last year, particularly when prosecutors initially opted to bring the lesser charge of manslaughter against Guyger, 31.

The sentence was less than the 28 years prosecutors had sought. Judge Tammy Kemp said the jury had imposed no fine. Guyger glanced quickly at her family but betrayed no emotion as she was led out of the courtroom.

Jean's slaying by a white police officer had provoked street protests, particularly after prosecutors initially opted to charge Guyger with manslaughter rather than murder.

Lawyers for the victim's family said they believed the verdict was the first time a white female police officer had been found guilty of first-degree murder in the killing of an unarmed black man.

"This is a historic case and history provides us with a teachable moment," said civil rights attorney Benjamin Crump, who also represented the family of Trayvon Martin, the Florida teenager shot and killed in 2012 by a civilian neighborhood watchman who was later cleared in court.

This case was unlike other recent high-profile killings, such as those of Michael Brown in Missouri and Philando Castile in Minnesota, since Guyger was not on duty or responding to a reported crime when she fired.

Outside the courthouse, protesters blasted the sentence as too short. They shouted, "No justice, no peace!" and "This is so wrong!"

> "How can this be possible?"
> Jean's father

"How can this be possible?" Jean's father cried as he told the jury of his intense pain following the murder of his son, who he said brought joy to those around him.

"How could we lose Botham - such a sweet boy? He tried his best to live a good honest life. He loved God. He loved everyone," Bertrum Jean said as he wept. "How can this be possible? I'll never see him again. I want to see him!"

Guyger, who had spent four years on the force before the killing, took the rare step of testifying in her own defense during her trial, tearfully expressing regret for shooting Jean but saying she had believed her life was in danger when she pulled the trigger.

Prosecutors also argued that Guyger did little to help Jean even after realizing her mistake, calling the 911 emergency phone number for an ambulance but not administering first aid.

During the trial, Guyger's defense attorney said she was "on autopilot" after a long work day, when she mistakenly parked on the wrong floor in the garage and was able to enter Jean's apartment because he had left the door slightly ajar.

"I'm so sorry, I'm so sorry. I have to live with this every single day," Guyger told the jury of eight women and four men.

In cross-examination, Assistant District Attorney Jason Hermus asked her, "When you shot him twice, you intended to kill him, didn't you?"

"I did," Guyger responded, in a calm voice.

Bronx man accused of molesting teenage boy

NYPD is investigating a 31-year-old man for allegedly performing sexual acts on a minor.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

A Bronx man has been arrested after allegedly holding a 15-year-old boy in his apartment to perform sexual acts.

It was reported that in addition to performing sexual acts, the suspect recorded the encounters.

Although the suspect was arrested Tuesday morning, officials are now looking for more victims of the Bronx man, who has been identified as Michael Barreto, 31, according to CBS.

They report that officials said they were following the missing-persons report for the teen. The search began in Manhattan and led them to the Bronx where they eventually apprehended Barreto.

Barreto has been charged with sex offenses and child endangerment after officials obtained a search warrant for his apartment.

Sources told CBS that they found videos and images of the teen on Barreto's phone and computers. It was also reported that they found filming equipment and toys of a sexual nature in the man's bedroom.

The 15-year-old told officers he was in the Bronx to visit his friend.

Investigators told outlets that the 15-year-old had met Barreto two years ago when Barreto was selling candy. The teen was allegedly molested by Barreto before this most recent incident.

ABC reports that Barreto has three prior arrests — one as recent as Sept. 7 — when he was arrested for "acting in a manner injurious to a child, harassment and unlawful imprisonment."

Other young boys from the same apartment building reported that the suspect had previously tried to lure them into his apartment.

Neighbors have also reported that Barreto has tried to entice several young people by claiming they would play video games or watch films before the encounter would turn physical.

It was reported that neighbors were aware of his past convictions — even his past prison terms — and considered him to be a predator.

Barreto has been transferred from NYPD custody to the feds and was set to be arraigned in federal court in lower Manhattan Wednesday.

R. Kelly gets May 2020 trial date in sex abuse case

Singer R. Kelly will face a May 18 trial on charges that he recruited underage girls and women to have sex with him, isolating them and controlling what they ate and when they went to the bathroom, a U.S. judge ruled on Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge Ann Donnelly set the date for next year's trial, which had been agreed on by prosecutors and Kelly's lawyers, at a hearing in federal court in Brooklyn.

The 52-year-old R&B singer, known for such hits as "I Believe I Can Fly" and "Bump N' Grind," was arrested in Chicago in July on separate sets of charges brought by federal prosecutors in Brooklyn and Chicago. He has pleaded not guilty.

The singer had denied abuse allegations for decades before the latest charges. In 2008, he was tried on child pornography charges and found not guilty.

REUTERS

Federal prosecutors in Brooklyn say Kelly and his entourage invited women and girls backstage after concerts, kept them from friends and family and made them dependent on him financially.

The Chicago prosecutors said Kelly had sexual contact with five minors and recorded sexually explicit videos of some of them. They also accused Kelly of obstructing justice by using threats and bribes, including payments of hundreds of thousands of dollars, to keep his victims quiet.

A trial in Chicago has been scheduled for April 27.

The federal charges were brought after seven women, including his ex-wife, appeared on a Lifetime network television documentary which aired in January and accused him of emotional and sexual abuse.

Kelly has been in jail since his July arrest, despite his lawyers' repeated efforts to have him released on bail. Judges in both Brooklyn and Chicago would need to sign off on his release, and Judge Donnelly on Wednesday refused to do so, saying there was a substantial risk he would flee the country.

In addition to the two federal cases, Kelly is facing charges from state prosecutors in Illinois and Minnesota. He has pleaded not guilty to those charges as well. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Vintage B-17 bomber makes fiery fatal landing in Connecticut, seven killed

A World War II-era B-17 bomber trying to make an emergency landing at an airport near Hartford, Connecticut, crashed and burned on Wednesday, killing seven people and closing the airport for several hours, authorities said.

The Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress returned to Bradley International Airport within 10 minutes of take-off after reporting "some type of problem," but lost control on the runway and struck a maintenance facility and tanks of de-icing fluid, Connecticut Airport Authority Executive Director Kevin Dillon told reporters.

Seven people died in the crash and six others were hospitalized with injuries ranging from minor to critical, James Rovella, commissioner of the Department of Emergency Services and Public Protection, told a news conference.

The airport, located in the town of Windsor Locks, was closed for about 3-1/2 hours after the crash.

The National Transportation Safety Board said it was investigating the crash. REUTERS

‘I think it’s fair to say the stakes are higher for the Peaky Blinders now more than ever’

Cillian Murphy MATT SQUIRE

Cillian Murphy talks psychological intensity and devastating historical effects in “Peaky Blinders” season 5

MOLLY GIVEN

“Don’t f—ck with the Peaky Blinders”— that phrase is incredibly prevalent in the BAFTA-winning crime saga returning this week to Netflix.

“Peaky Blinders” is loosely based on a real gang in Birmingham, England who sewed razor-blades into their caps in the early 1900s and since it’s premiere in 2013, has amassed a huge cult following.

Some audiences enjoy the harsh violence, some are enthralled by the intense story-lines, but most are entranced by the polarizing gang-leader, Tommy Shelby, played by Ireland-native Cillian Murphy.

Murphy sat down with Metro to discuss season 5 and dive into why the melancholic inner-workings of his character’s mind has become more apparent than ever.

“I think that it’s pretty obvious [Tommy is] experiencing the war over again,” says Murphy. “It has such a profound effect on him. I always say that there is a line that you can draw, and the line is the first World War. There’s a post-World-War Tommy and a pre-World-War Tommy. The only one we meet on the show is the soldier who’s come back from the first World War.”

Some may think the ardent effect the war has on Shelby and the men who make up the Peaky Blinders has acted as a backseat motivator for many of their criminal and explosive tendencies. But to Murphy, the war still has a mainstage role in Tommy Shelby’s mind.

“He came back completely transformed and two things happened: He was completely unafraid of death which then made him a very scary person to encounter as an enemy, and he also became Godless and faithless. He poured everything into this kind of ambition because he had seen so much and witnessed horrors that I couldn’t even begin to imagine. So for him every day was kind of like dullness,” says Murphy. “He is an extraordinary character who is effectively suffering from chronic PTSD that has never been identified or treated. He’s also fiercely intelligent. So when you meet him in series 5, he’s been living with this for however many years — 10 I think, but he’s never dealt with it, and I think all of those issues are coming to fruition. He’s also experiencing middle age, and he’s in that time in his life where he’s got everything he could wish for materially and he’s achieved everything he could wish for in terms of power. But yet he’s unfulfilled.”

The hunger the family experiences for power has been the main storyline for the past four seasons (cue the angry Italian mob seeking revenge, or the horde of Russians seeking chaos) and it still is in the fifth season.

But the stakes are much higher this time around. The government is now acting like the mob and politics are fueling the chaos. Take that in with the globally-devastating stock market crash and you have a true recipe for intensity.

"I think it's fair to say the stakes are higher for the Peaky Blinders now more than ever," Murphy said. "The fortune they have amassed over the past 10 years has just been stolen away from them and for many others by the [stock market] crash."

"They have to kind of go back to some of their more traditional means of earning cash — more underhand and less conventional. Then Tommy is sort of facing a lot of pressure from this younger generation of the family, which is embodied by Michael [Finn Cole] who is advocating for change and has all sorts of ideas for expansion with the family and the gang. Tommy is resisting that. Most importantly, I think he's come face to face with this ideology of fascism which is personified by Oswald Mosely [Sam Claflin] and he has to deal with that."

As an actor, Murphy enjoys the challenge of the intricate layers that make up Shelby's mind, especially when working with creator and writer Steven Knight.

With most gangster-driven shows, the characters are always colorful but sometimes lack the ambition to expand. With "Peaky Blinders" the motivation to expand is paramount and you never quite know what to expect with each episode — hence the high anticipation for season 5.

"I've said it before about the series, but to me, it feels like a psychological thriller meets a political thriller. It has elements of both of those in it," says Murphy. "Steve's writing is some of the best writing I've ever encountered in my career. The amount of work he's put into this is very rare, especially for one writer to completely take control of a television show, particularly one that's been running for this long. To write all of it himself is not common, and we are very privileged to have such an extraordinary writer."

With season five catapulting the Shelby family into an intense cacophony of loud convictions and acute danger, the Peaky Blinders themselves are more polarizing to watch than ever. To Murphy, even after the Great War that stole vital moments away from Shelby's life, the greatest battle is going on now inside of his own character's head.

"The psychological element is very strong for me, and it's something I very much responded to in the writing," says Murphy. "I think in this season that Tommy, in particular, is battling with some things a lot deeper and a lot more dangerous — not as conventional as say, something like the mafia was last year. This year he's battling with himself, he's battling with his own family, and he's battling with an ideology. That's not something you can take care of with machine guns."

"Peaky Blinders" season 5 drops on Netflix Oct. 4

The actress plays an astronaut in her latest film, "Lucy in the Sky."

MARÍA ESTÉVEZ MWN
letters@metro.us

Natalie Portman exists in a unique universe. That is why, perhaps, she is able to impersonate the character of her last film Lucy, for whom the routines of a domestic life stop being important after she felt the vastness of space. Portman, like her character, boasts a higher than average IQ. And this is apparent in every role that she takes on, whether it is a hitman, ballet dancer or Jackie Kennedy. This time, Natalie ventures into space as a NASA astronaut, which forces her to become a mentally and emotionally unstable woman. Based on the story of Lisa Nowak's criminal activities around her romantic involvement with fellow astronaut William Oefelein, the film shows that Portman has a talent for squeezing human obsessions. Metro caught up with the actress in Los Angeles to learn more about the film.

How did you live the adventure of playing Lucy, a woman who struggles with mental and spiritual challenges following her return from space?
For me the important thing was to portray the existential crisis that Lucy suffers. Something that happens when you have an experience that allows you to be more alive than ever. Part of that experience was to discover how small we are, and the little importance of our routines within the universe. The relationship she has with the character of Jon Hamm awakens within her something that was asleep. During that trip she understands that nothing matters, that she can do whatever she wants. Lucy is struggling to make sense of her life. She wants to find feelings similar to what she has lived in space, and yet nothing seems to achieve that.

You filmed the movie in chronological order. Did that influence your performance?
A lot. It was difficult to record in chronological order because it required a great concentration from my part. Noah's work as a director was very specific because he built the narrative with Lucy increasingly becoming a prisoner of herself. As an actress, I felt the loop around the neck while I was accumulating the character's anxiety. When her grandmother gets sick, when she dies, when she cheats and breaks up with her husband… These are situations that increase the psychosis. I am grateful to Noah because he allowed me to change certain elements of the character that told me more about her personality and that I could adapt.

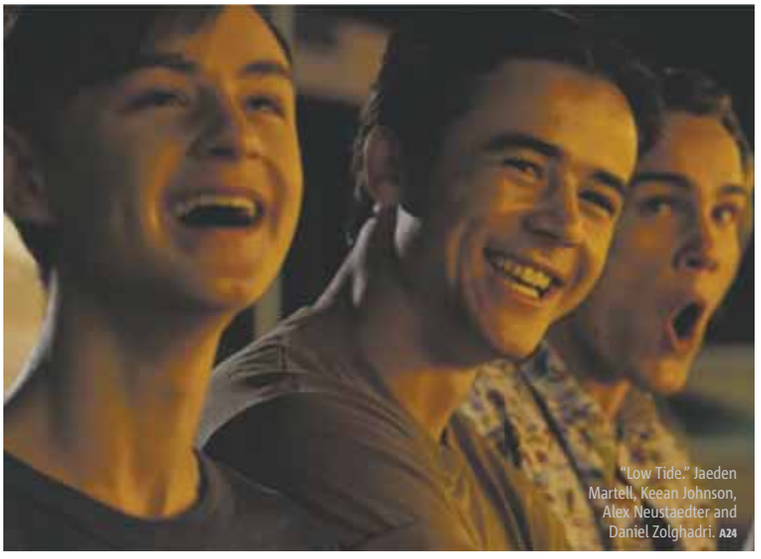
So you are playing an independent woman with psychological problems?
What I appreciate about this movie is that when a woman astronaut is portrayed, she is usually described with a child on the Earth. And that is the only possible drama, as she spends time thinking about her family. Being able to play a woman who remains free from that conflict and who faces another type of drama, such as experiencing an existential crisis, seemed quite radical and very significant. I don't say it to criticise, but because I love stories about female astronauts.

In one scene we see Lucy on the verge of psychosis. She cannot sleep and hears voices. Did you do any research about mental illnesses?
Yes, because part of what happens is part of human behaviour when living an experience of these dimensions. But in the case of Lucy I wanted to give it more depth, it is not a unique trauma, nor is her behaviour marked only by her bedtime, or the pain of her grandmother's loss… there are many things. She is influenced by her family's past, sleepless hours, the return from space and the period of adaptation necessary to admit that she sees and understands things in a different way. It is her problem at work, the relationship she has outside of marriage, the discrimination she suffers as a woman. Each person is a constellation of problems. And our behaviour responds to the way we assimilate those problems. There is undoubtedly an element of mental instability, although I do not think it is the only reason she responds in that way.

Do you think 'Lucy in the Sky' is a feminist film that fits with the times we live in?
All the films that are made about a woman portray the complexity. And without a doubt, there is an element of specific intentionality in showing defects and virtues, including vanity. And yes, it is a feminist film but of another kind. I think we are portraying the female characters deeper, because they are agents of their own narrative.

This film adds to the conversation about the pressure that is imposed on women who are involved in very competitive jobs.
I think the world of ballet and the world of aeronautics are different. Female astronauts could be counted with one hand. When a woman stands out in a position of power, she is described as just "she." Because she is the only one at the table. When you are unique, your name is not used, just your gender. "That woman, she." You become "The Woman." But if there is more than one, there is a need to pay attention. In this film we wanted to highlight that specific aspect of being unique at work, because it is a very particular situation. There is also the opposite, professions that identify with women, such as nursing, that degrade simply because of that. But that is another conversation.

Filmmaker Kevin McMullin on his new buried-treasure film 'Low Tide'



"Low Tide." Jaeden Martell, Keean Johnson, Alex Neustaedter and Daniel Zolghadri. A24

The new film, starring Jaeden Martell, hits theaters this weekend.

PAT KING

It's one thing to feel like a tourist in a part of the world you have no right to call your true home. But it's another thing completely to try to fit in with a rough, hard-edged crowd that can see right through you. Writer-director Kevin McMullin explores the juxtaposition of being both a physical and emotional tourist in his first full-length feature film, "Low Tide," in theaters this weekend.

The film follows a gang of three teens, Alan (Keean Johnson), Smitty (Daniel Zolghadri) and their hot-tempered leader Red (Alex Neustaedter) as they break into the summer houses of wealthy tourists who have second homes on their blue-collar New Jersey shore town. Once Smitty breaks his leg leaving a job, the gang is left without a third man as a lookout and need to enlist Alan's brother Peter (Jaeden Martell, from "It") to come along for their next heist. That score is the rumored buried gold left unclaimed by a recently deceased old man who had lived out on one of the town's remote islands. Once this treasure comes into play, their close-knit dynamic begins to fracture like caked mud underneath their boots.

When I spoke with McMullin over the phone, I asked if he had a similar upbringing as the gang in the film or if he was considered what they would call a "BENNY" — someone from Bayonne, Elizabeth, Newark and New York.

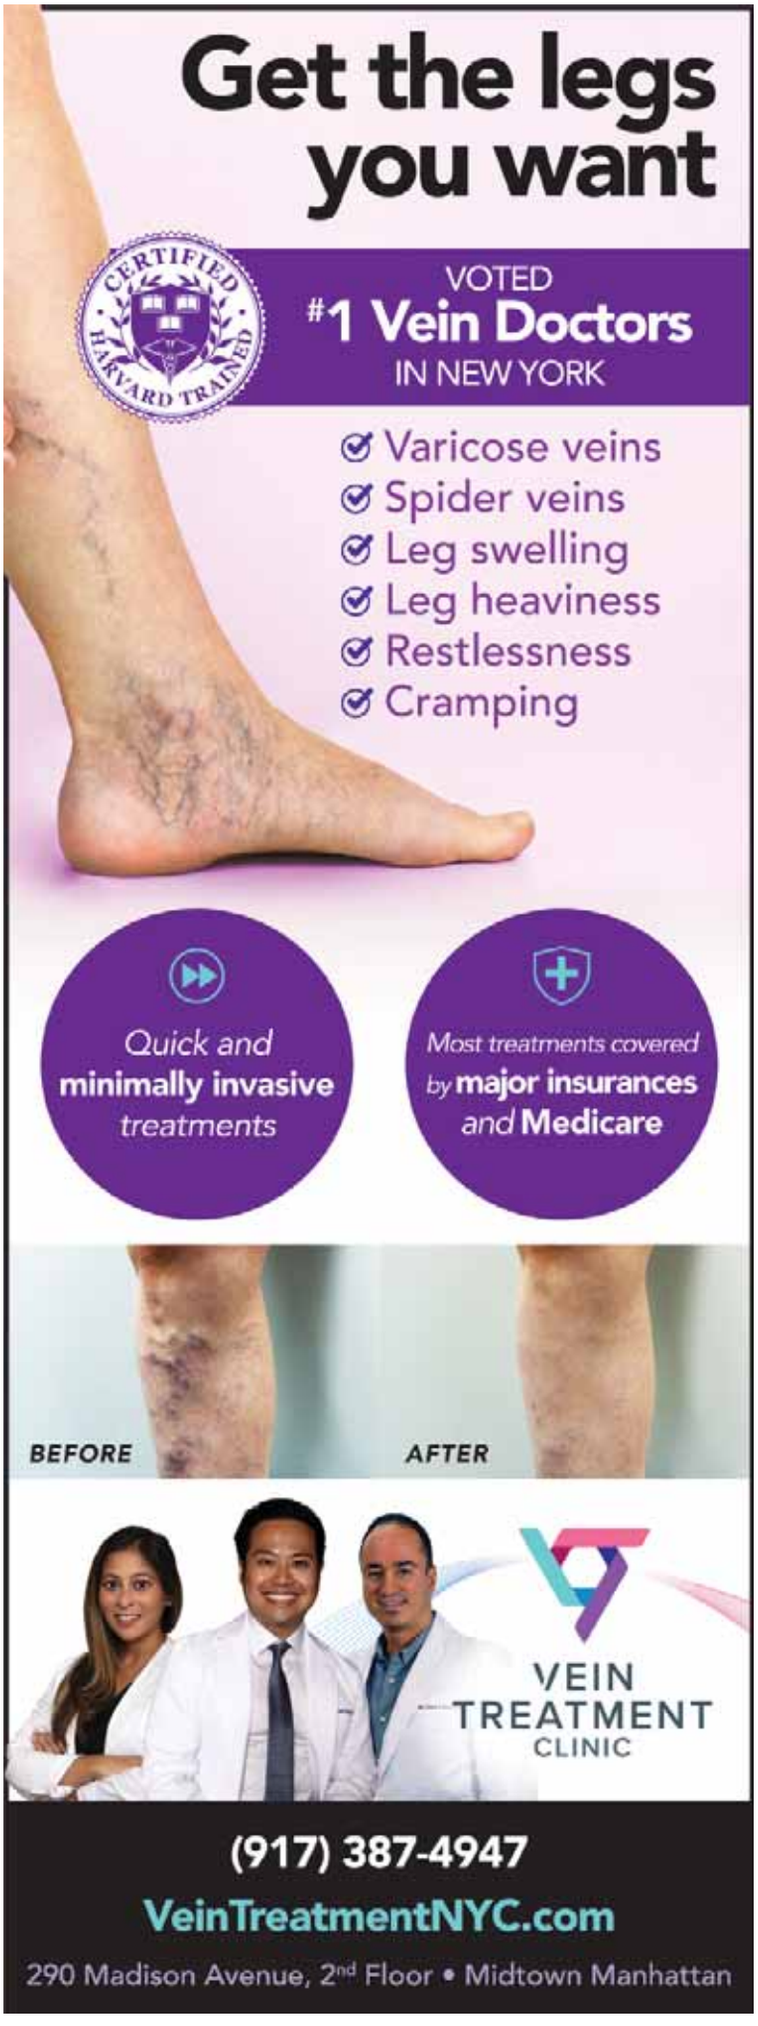
"I was a little of both, actually," says McMullin, who spent much of his formative years in Point Pleasant Beach, N.J., where the majority of the movie was filmed. "It's middle-class with a lot of blue-collar folks who live there year-round. Then in the summer, there's a lot of summer vacationers. I always thought that dichotomy was interesting and worth exploring. Especially through a group of local kids who, I wouldn't say are like Robin Hood, but maraud and pillage wealthy vacation homes."

As the kids get in a little bit too deep over their heads, they begin to brush up against the law, namely with local Sergeant Kent, played by Shea Whigham. The cast of mostly child actors completely encapsulates the paranoia and fears that McMullin hoped to convey in the film. Early on, he was thankful to cast Martell as Peter, who serves as the film's moral center.

"One of the first phone calls I ever got was from the reps for Jaeden Martel. They said he was interested in playing Peter, who I think was originally written to be slightly younger in the script. But I knew from the get-go that this was going to be the most challenging role to cast, because it was a young actor with a severe character arc. When Jaeden's name popped up, I recognized it immediately from 'Midnight Special' and 'St. Vincent.' When I got the opportunity to speak with him on Skype, he was the sweetest kid. Really shy, pensive and thoughtful. He understood the character, the story, and had great ideas. I thought, we are going to be so lucky to have him," says McMullin.

At its core, "Low Tide" is a buried-treasure film. I ask McMullin if the pursuit of a chest full of gold is something that he thinks will always be a universal dream for those looking for a life-changing payday.

"My favorite thing about those narratives, and this movie, is that it's less about the treasure," explains McMullin. "Even though I understand the mythology and where that gold comes from and why it was found, it's not that important emotionally. It was more fun for the audience to watch a room full of kids who found it, lie to each other."



Banksy inaugurates a store in London

Street artist's works are exhibited

The opening of a new showroom in Croydon, south London, England, has surprised the public. It is a shop organized by Banksy, where he will sell some of his works. According to the English artist, the store will not open its doors (it will only be possible to shop online) and will be operating for a couple of weeks. MWN

Dozens of people approached the store to observe Banksy's works. ALL PHOTOS GETTY

Why is there a need for a store?

Banksy explained that the reason for opening this showroom is merely legal, due to the fact that he was being "forced" to launch the online shop – called Gross Domestic Product – because a greeting cards company was attempting to legally trade using his name. In addition, the artist added that the profits with online sales would be used to purchase a new migrant rescue boat. MWN

2019-20 PREVIEW

With rebuild almost complete, can the Rangers make a playoff push in 2019-20?

A blockbuster offseason has the Rangers poised to make some noise in the Eastern Conference this season.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

So much for the slow and steady rebuild.

The New York Rangers catapulted up projected 2019-20 standings this summer thanks to an aggressive offseason from general manager Jeff Gorton.

While the organization is keeping its promise of constructing a contender through its youth, the Rangers weren't afraid to splash some cash or make a big trade.

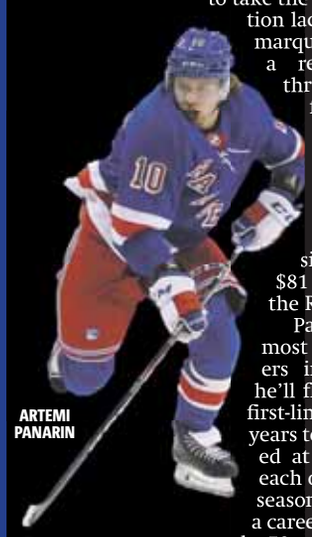
It has the team poised to make a run toward the playoffs in a difficult Metropolitan Division that featured five of the eight Eastern Conference playoff teams.

It won't be an easy task considering there is plenty of questions involving the team's reconstructed defense and its depth down the middle of its forward lines.

With plenty of promise and concern, Metro takes a look at some of the most important things to watch out for regarding the Rangers this season:

OPENING NIGHT
JETS vs. RANGERS
7 PM ET
MSG NETWORK

THE SUPERSTAR



ARTEMI PANARIN

While the Rangers have an abundance of youngsters ready to take the torch, the organization lacked an established, marquee name to provide a reliable, immediate threat within the offense.

They got just that in the blockbuster signing of Artemi Panarin, who turned down more money to sign a seven-year, $81 million deal with the Rangers in July.

Panarin is one of the most gifted playmakers in the NHL where he'll flank the Blueshirts' first-line left-wing spot for years to come. He's recorded at least 74 points in each of his first four NHL seasons and is coming off a career-high 87 points (28 goals, 59 assists) last year with the Columbus Blue Jackets.

THE NEXT ONE

Sure, the Rangers offered Panarin the promise of playing in a big market with an Original 6 franchise, they also had just acquired one of the most promising young talents available at the 2019 NHL Draft.

With the No. 2 pick, the Rangers took Finnish right-winger Kaapo Kakko, regarded by many as the top player in the Class of 2019, even better than Jack Hughes.

As an 18-year-old he recorded 22 goals and 16 assists (38 points) in just 45 games in Finland's top professional league last year.

Kakko is incredibly strong on the puck and will be a scoring threat from anywhere on the ice. Pair that with stellar vision to distribute and the Rangers might have a golden playmaker on their hands.

NEW YORK RANGERS
2019-20 PREVIEW

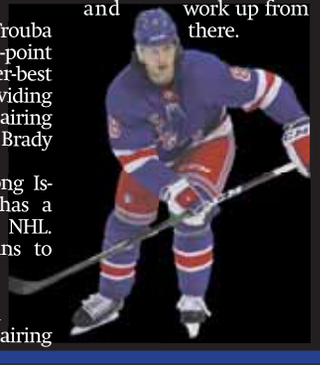
DEFENSIVE UPGRADES

There was no denying that the Rangers were in desperate need of help on their blue line after allowing 272 goals last season, which was sixth-worst in the Eastern Conference last season.

Gorton was plenty aggressive in finding that help, acquiring Jacob Trouba from the Winnipeg Jets and Adam Fox from the Carolina Hurricanes.

The 25-year-old Trouba is coming off a 50-point season with a career-best 48 takeaways, providing a bona fide first-pairing partner alongside Brady Skjei.

Fox, 21, is a Long Island native who has a high-ceiling in the NHL. However, it remains to be seen how he'll adjust to life in the pros. Expect him to start as a third-pairing blueliner alongside fellow youngster Libor Hajek and work up from there.



THE KING'S LAST STAND?

It's clear that Henrik Lundqvist's best days are behind him.

The 37-year-old is coming off his worst season as a pro, going 18-23-10 with a .907 save percentage and a 3.07 goals-against average.

It didn't help that the defense in front of him was sieve-like — and the hope will be that his numbers will improve after adding the likes of Trouba and Fox on the blue line.

To keep him fresh, it will be imperative for the Rangers to properly manage his time on the ice. Alexander Georgiev performed well last season, which could be enough to earn him more starts in 2019-20.

A well-rested Lundqvist will only increase the chances of a return of "The King," who has been one of the game's most reliable goaltenders of this generation.
